OUR CIRCULATION.
We mean to keep the following paragraph standing for the benefit of all who may be interested in the circulation of the Journal. We would not content ourselves with the attention of the advertising committee. The "Wilmington Journal" circulates upwards of 32 thousand copies weekly. Its circulation in the town of Wilmington is as large as that of any other paper published in the place. It is the only paper published in the counties which trade to this place in large quantities. It is the only paper published in the North Carolina, and that is its chief claim to attention. We say, therefore, without the fear of overstatement, that it is the best vehicle for advertising which the advertiser can select. One other observation we make, that although a large majority of the readers of the "Journal" are Democrats, still they occasionally read a little of the "Journal," as well as the readers of the whig papers. We have written the above merely for the information of those who are most deeply interested in the circulation of all professions and all political creeds—who want customers.

PROSPECTUS OF
The Carolina Gazette.
The subscriber intends to publish a weekly newspaper in the town of Wilmington, N.
C., with the above title. The first number will make its appearance on or before the first of January next.
The GAZETTE is now an applicant for an adequate support, and to secure it, we will not make the paper worthy by excluding every article inculcating false or vicious principles, and admitting only such as will inform or elevate the understanding. News of importance will have an early insertion, and the best information of our readers will be given. It will advocate Democratic principles as they are demonstrated by a pure system of political ethics. We intend that the paper shall present a neat mechanical appearance, as well as exhibit matter distinguished for its excellence. In a word, the GAZETTE will be the best interests of society.
We believe that such a paper as the GAZETTE is designed to be will meet with liberal encouragement from all classes. We claim the privilege of pursuing the business to which we were brought up, in that portion of the Old North State which gave us birth, and we hope that the Farmer, Merchant and Mechanic, will bid the GAZETTE adieu, ward, by increasing its circulation and usefulness through their names and money.
We deem it altogether unnecessary to enter into any long-winded essay in a Prospectus, but with these few remarks we submit it to the public for their approval or rejection.
TERMS.—The GAZETTE will be published weekly, on a Super-Royal sheet, with new type and on good paper, at the low price of $2 00 per annum, payable on receipt of the first number.
Persons wishing to subscribe to the GAZETTE will please address the subscriber, post paid, at Wilmington, N. C.
All who receive this Prospectus will please endeavor to procure subscribers for us, and return the names of all who may subscribe on or before the 20th of December. WM. J. YOPP.
Editors of newspapers throughout the State will confer a favor by giving the above a few insertions.

"THE FRIENDS OF PEACE."—THE OLD
"PEACE SOCIETIES" OF THE LAST WAR OVER AGAIN!

Some of Mr. Clay's friends are following his advice to hold meetings to re-echo his resolutions. We observe a call, signed by this two names in Cincinnati, for a meeting of "the friends of peace." They will, of course, adopt Mr. Clay's sentiments; and the very question which these friends of peace are taking is most strangely calculated to defeat the object they profess. The union of the country is the harbinger of success. A united front has ever produced, and will produce, the it is such proceedings as Mr. Clay and his friends are taking as will be caught up and circulated in the Mexican journals, and cheer up the hopes of the enemy and procrastinate a peace. But they cannot defeat it. The whigs in Congress will not venture to refuse supplies; and with adequate supplies, they will secure a permanent and honorable peace. If the so-called "friends of peace," therefore, desire peace, they must vote supplies. If they refuse them, be the responsibility theirs—they bear the blame—their disgrace of the country. Upon their heads be the scorn of Europe, and the anathemas of their own countrymen.

The time was, when their great leader, who now sighs over the war, and for the blessings of peace, held a very different language. It was during the war of 1812, when he supported the administration and the war against Great Britain, that he employed his eloquence in the defence of his country, and that he hurled his thunder against the opposition. But quantum mutatus ab illo! Mr. Clay is now one of the opposition—in the midst of a foreign war, too—while the rights and honor of his country are at issue—in the midst, too, of the most brilliant achievements which the arms of the United States have ever won.
Being desirous of doing more of a wholesale business than heretofore, he has laid in his stock principally in original packages, and for cash, which will enable him to compete successfully with any market. He desires those in want of any of the above articles to give him a call.

aims to extinguish or allay prejudices. But this patriotic exertion does not suit the views of those who are urged on by diabolical ambition. They find it convenient to imagine the existence of certain improper influences, and to excite with a thermometer industry a belief of them. Hence the idea of southern preponderance—Virginia influence—the yoking of the respectable yeomanry of the north, with negro slaves, to the car of southern nabobs."

"No, sir; the administration has erred in the steps which it has taken to restore peace, but it has not been in doing too little, but in betraying too great a solicitude for that event. An honorable peace is obtainable only by an efficient war. My plan would be to call out the whole resources of the country; give them a judicious direction; prosecute the war with the utmost vigor; strike wherever we can with effect; and, at the same time, and at Hal-fax. We are told that England is a proud and lofty nation, which, disdaining to wait for danger, meets it half way. Haughty as she is, we once triumphed over her; and, if we do not listen to the counsels of timidity and despair, she shall again prevail. In such a cause, with the aid of Providence, we must come out crowned with success; but if we fail, let us fall like men—lash ourselves to our gallant tars, and expire together in one common struggle, fighting for free trade and seamen's rights."

THE RIVAL POLITICIANS.
OR THE FIGHT BETWEEN TOMPKINS AND LEARY.
Larry Leary and Bill Tompkins, we are pained to say, got rather high last night whilst discussing politics and a couple of gin cocktails. Mr. Leary was a tall, spare man, with black eyes, a determined expression, and a countenance, and a juvenile pair of whiskers.
His lips, save when he slipped his gin, were set close together; and his hands, save when he grasped his glass, were clenched tightly.
He was dressed in a pair of blue cottoned pantaloons, a check shirt, and had a broad leather belt around his waist. His companion, Bill Tompkins, was quite a different individual. He was a short, plump man, with full-blown cheeks as red as a carnation, and a nose almost as blue as an indigo. His gait was a sailor-like waddle, and he wore in his left hand something that undoubtedly seemed to be a huge quid. Bill Tompkins was in fact a fat, coarse, frolicsome son of Neptune, and Larry Leary a hard-working landsman, whose chief fault was that he would get into a passion when contradicted. Bill was a sailor on board the ship that Larry had been working on as a stevedore, and having formed a friendship for each other, they resolved to have a friendly glass together. After having drank, they got a couple of gin cocktails, and then a small piece table to have a smoke.

"Rilly, me boy," said Larry, giving his pipe a whiff that sent the grey smoke in curly wreaths to the ceiling, where numerous squads of flies were doing, "what 'ye think of the times?"
"Ye've had Larry, they're bad," said Bill, giving his trousers a hitch with one hand, and while he balanced his pipe with the other.
"The times, Larry, as I once heard a play actor say, who tuk to the drama from butcherin', is 'out of joint.' Here we've got the yaller Mexikins, and the Injun Camanches to lick, and Larry Jones knows what else to do."
"But it's not that," said Larry, leaning back in his chair, "I mane what do ye think of the political times. Are they favorable or unfavorable for our party?"
"Which party do ye mean, Larry?" inquired Bill, with his pipe between his teeth.
"The 'Union' party, answering Larry, with a cunning wink. "Will you call Scott, or would Taylor, be the next President?"
"Well, I don't 'zactly know, but I don't think neither 'em will be," answered Bill, with the gravity of a prophet who sees far into the future, and tells foreboding events at a glance.

"Aint odd Scott a gentleman or a soldier?" inquired Larry, with some asperity of manner.
"An who said as how he wasn't?" said Bill, bristling up like a bull-dog, in the angriest mood.
"Aint odd Taylor a war-horse or a soldier?" inquired Larry, erecting himself as erect like a rattlesnake on the eve of making a spring.
"An who said he wasn't?" answered Bill, dashing his pipe on the table, and glaring furiously at Larry.
"Did ye mane that for me?" said Larry, turning up his shirt sleeves.
"Yes," said Bill, in a surly tone, "for you are for any one to take a walk in my part."
"Thin take that," said Larry, as he dealt him a blow between the eyes.
Bill was staggered for a moment, but instantly recovering himself, he was into Larry like a thousand of brick. They clinched and fell on the floor, to the great amusement of the bystanders, and the barkeepers, who forgot even to give change to their customers in witnessing the fight.

"Scott," hailed Larry, giving his opponent a dab in the eye. "Taylor
